

account. Once you are through this checkup of your profile, it is time to change a few settings if you haven't already changed them.

1. Lock your profile

Profile Lock is a very neat feature that has been introduced by Facebook, that allows the users to make all the information that is available on the platform locked away from strangers. If you have locked your profile, any person who is not your friend would not be able to see what you have posted on your profile. Only your profile photo and background photo will be available for them to see, but that also they would not be able to expand.

2. Choose what you want to show and whom you want to show

Facebook Privacy settings allow users to manually change which section of profile would be seen by a given group of people, if at all it is enabled. Primarily, there were four options to choose from, but now the list of options has been expanded to include six different options. They are: Public, Friends, Friends except..., Specific friends, Only me, Custom.

Protect every post as if it were your last

3. Scan your friends list

There are times when an unnoticed misclick causes some unwanted people to be added as friends on your Facebook account. So, make sure