

cases, prevent it from happening altogether. So, in this chapter we will tell you how to watch out for these fraudulent activities and prevent them from happening.

Recover your lost money in online fraud

In case you feel that any amount of money has been stolen from your bank account in any fraudulent way, one of the first things that you should do is call up the bank and the related authorities as soon as possible. The way these frauds work is by siphoning off the stolen money to a rat's nest of channels, which by every passing second, get more and more complex and harder to track and trace.

This means that, every minute you spend in delaying conveying the information to the concerned authorities, the money gets divided into smaller and smaller accounts and is sent to different accounts, which not only makes it harder for the authorities to track, but also recover the amount as a whole. If they are able to trace one or two channels, they will be able to get a much smaller amount of money as time passes.

Register for alerts

SMS and other forms of alerts given by the banks are very important to make the consumers aware, about the transactions that are being

Those pings are useful