

- Password fraud – where their password would be easy for a hacker to guess (42 percent)
- Phishing and vishing – where they get a call/text from a person pretending to be a bank or card representative to disclose personal details and/or card number (42 percent)
- Malware/spyware – where they download infected software or viruses (32 percent)

As per the report, the vulnerability to fraud remained to be one of the biggest concerns that people had when it came to digital transactions, and this was followed by data privacy, then failed transaction and lastly, internet connectivity. 