

Paperland

Important note for this one, 95 per cent of the features is locked behind a “Pro” paid version of the app. The free version is decent, but not very customisable.

Paperland is a super cosy and comfy live wallpaper app. Utilising the old school cartoony aesthetic, the app shows a nice night-time city skyline with cars cruising along a long road as little houses and trees slowly scroll by, it auto-generates a lovely looking scene that constantly moves along. The features in this app include a theme manager which saves various settings and allows you to import and load them at a later time. You can also control the objects which are generated in the scene, from cars and hills to dolphins and birds.

There is also a fancy randomise option, which magically produces an odd yet pleasing effect every single time. And if you like the art style but don't want the whole live aspect, then you can even create a static picture, although we suspect you wouldn't be reading this section up to this point if you were looking for that.

Interactive Wallpapers

While GIFs or video wallpapers are cool, they don't hold a candle to interactive wallpapers that react to your every touch. There are so many variants of interactive wallpapers, from just visually striking and appealing ones, to wallpapers that integrate utility with style and interactive features. We'll be covering one of each type for the Artist Andy or the Productive Peter, so you'll have a quality app no matter what you need.

Wellpaper

What do you get when you mix productivity with style? Wellpaper is a stunningly simplistic solution to this, as it creates an interactive clean looking wallpaper, based on your phone's app usage.
