

There are options between Socials, Entertainment, Games, Info and Business, Lifestyle and Tools. We suspect if you are an avid reader of the magazine, the last section would be the most appealing for you.

There is a small but decent selection of options to pick for the art style of the background, from Cosmos which showcases planets and the size of each planet dictates the category usage amount, to Composition and Ripples, which are more minimalistic approaches to the same principle of the amount of colour dictating the ratio of utilisation.

Simply pick your choice of theme, and set it as your wallpaper. On the home screen, tap anywhere for the percentages to show up in the background on each section.

You can go to the settings menu of Wellpaper to change the categories, under the “Configure App Categories” section. If there are apps that are not categorised or are accidentally miscategorized, you can select the right section to put them under. As for the two of you who put all their games in the Information and Business section, we’ve got our eyes on you!

As an additional benefit, it tracks your overall
