

Installing And Using A Widget Pack

Now that you know how to set up a widget of your own, let us walk you through the actual reason behind KWGT's popularity. It's Widget Packs. We have already touched on the packages or "packs" for short and the only thing that's left here is their installation.

Firstly, find and open the Play Store listing of the pack you want to install.

We'll be using the Rainbow KWGT pack for this tutorial.

One thing to note here is that not ALL widget packs support the free version of KWGT. Some will compulsorily require the pro version to be unlocked to function. Usually, you'll find it listed in the description of the app itself.

Now, download and install the app. Once it's done downloading and installing, just like you did with the KWGT app, DO NOT open it right away. Follow the steps above and place a 4 x 4 blank widget on your home screen. This time, just resize it to cover the whole blank area (for purposes of this guide only. You can resize the widgets in any way you want). It should look something like this.

Tap on that widget to open the control centre. Only this time, since you
