

have installed a widget pack, it should automatically show up under the “Installed Packs” section. Tap on that to show all the currently installed Widget Packs.

Tap on your desired widget pack to show its offerings. For this demo, since we’re using the Rainbow pack, we’ll tap on that and just like we browsed through the “Base Pack” earlier, we will be able to browse through this pack.

All that’s left is to pick a widget of your liking and start customising your home screen! Here’s a sample home screen that we made using only the Rainbow KWGT pack.

Unleashing The Full Power

For this booklet, we’ve picked five of the best KWGT Widget Packs that you can get right now. Obviously, your taste may differ from ours. Maybe you’re a light theme user. Or maybe you just want less intrusive widgets on your home screen. Trust us when we say this, there are a plethora of widget packs for KWGT and they’re just a search away. And we can guarantee you that you will find the one that suits your needs. We have kept links to all the Widget Packs mentioned on this page and some others which couldn’t make the cut but are still worth checking out.

Let’s start with the last one from the list.

Android 12 KWGT

It’s all fun and games till you realize that even though your phone is on Android 12, your manufacturer just doesn’t allow you to use those material widgets made by Google, especially for Android 12.

Well, worry no more. This Widget Pack will give you all of those sweet Android 12 goodness that you’ve been missing out on. Just follow the
