

You see, it is the home screen that actually makes your phone - yours. It is the home screen wallpaper that you change every week. It is the re-arrangement of icons, adding widgets, etc. that you do to your home screen to customise it to your liking. But there is a high chance that you might not even like your home screen at all. Maybe you don't prefer the “card” layout of MIUI, or you just don't like the icons of ColorOS or maybe you just got bored seeing the same old “swipe up for app drawer” and want something new and exciting for your home screen. Well, we got you covered. This is where Launchers come in. As we said earlier, Launchers are basically “replacements” for your home screen. They are just like any other app on the Play Store, except they cannot be “launched” per se. They are fully customisable home screens that support a variety of features and little additions. Once you try on a Launcher and you really like it, there really is no going back.

There are going to be two sections to this chapter - Customisable Launchers and Minimal Launchers. As both of their names suggest, Customisable Launchers offer a wide range of customisation in their overall look and feel while Minimal Launchers get straight to the point and display only what's necessary.

Customisable Launchers

Now that we're talking about fully customisable launchers, we have got some really good ones for you. We're saving the best for the last and well, spoiler alert, if you've ever even gazed through Android home screen customisation, you'll know this name very well.
