

Out of all the apps that we've covered till now, we found Crayon's app coverage to be the maximum. Almost every app that we had on our device was included in the Crayon Icon Pack and those who weren't were cleverly masked by the icon pack. Another good thing that we liked about the icon pack is the wallpapers that it comes with. You see, if you launch the app and go to the "Wallpapers" section, you'll find some amazing wallpapers that complement the icons included in the pack.

On the previous page you can see some of the icons included in the icon pack.

Pix Material You Icon Pack

This one is guaranteed to look good regardless of the wallpaper or theme you use. You can think of this icon pack as the inverted version of the 'Lines' icon pack which we covered above, but with a small twist.

Pix Material You Icon Pack provides you with adaptive icons as well as static icons. If you have Android 12, you're lucky. You can take full advantage of the "adaptive" icons that this icon pack provides. By adaptive, we mean that some icons will automatically change their colour + theme based on the wallpaper you're using. Although, if you have Android 8 - 11, you'll have to make do with the static icons. But, don't be disappointed yet. Even the static icons look really beautiful and minimal in your app drawer. Here's how they look.

They have a "pastel and muted" background with only the outlines of the icons in the foreground which give them a bold but still muted look. We really dig this look and we think that these icons are practically universal i.e. they'll go really well with any wallpaper you choose. Here's what we mean by that.

Now that you've seen what the static icons look like, let us take you through the adaptive icons. We're gonna say it again, this feature only works on Android 12. Now, in order to get the adaptive icons,
