

This becomes very useful because the scan time for Free Windows Registry Repair was the longest of all the registry cleaners that we have tried out, but the results appear to be satisfactory.

You can set this freeware registry repair application to automatically build backups and to create a system restore point before repairing mistakes, as well as to disregard missing files on portable storage. This free PC registry cleaning for Windows continues to be updated in a regular manner but we haven't seen an update after March 2021. This means it has not been updated for Windows 11 in particular. But you can use it for any Windows version up to Windows 10.

JetClean

JetClean, a free registry cleaning from BlueSprig, isn't widely known. However, those concerns go right out of the window once you experience it. It has a well-designed UI and it managed to scan the full registry in only a few seconds.

JetClean has two main flaws that folks concerned about their privacy might not like. For starters, it considers an excessive quantity of cookies to be keepable, by default. It tries to install a toolbar, but you can refuse it throughout the installation process. Toolbars used to be an extremely
