

Robots vs Human Beings

The ultimate showdown isn't far from now

So it's all come down to a showdown: humans vs robots. One is attempting to demonstrate that it is superior than the other. If robots are superior than humans in a task, they should be hired! At the very least, this is a scenario that many people worry will occur or has already occurred. But is such apprehension justified?

Will it ever come to a stage where working-class humans are rendered utterly obsolete, a world where robots are more than capable of performing all of the occupations that we once thought only humans were capable of?