Less buzz more music

This free music player is built to take advantage of your PC's hardware, including high-end soundcards and surround-sound systems, and stereo upmixing. You can choose to add silences or fades, normalise the volume, and experiment with the equalisation with continuous playback.

This free music player can play practically any audio format, and converting files is a breeze. If that wasn't enough, there's now an Android app for managing MusicBee from afar, as well as support for WinAmp plugins. While it isn't open source, it is fully free to use and modify for personal use.
