

may personalise the Start menu in Windows 11, your options are limited. We'll teach you how to customise the Start menu in Windows 11 and what to do if that isn't enough.

How to align the Start menu to the left

Right-click the Taskbar and select Taskbar settings to adjust the Start menu orientation. Expand Taskbar behaviours by scrolling down. You can change the Taskbar alignment to Center or Left from here. Changing the default centre alignment, while technically a Taskbar modification, makes it simpler to access the Start menu when your Taskbar is hidden.

How to manage pinned apps

The Start menu in Windows 11 comes pinned with pre-loaded programmes. You don't have to keep these apps, and you shouldn't allow them clog up your Start menu. Right-click an app and select Unpin from Start to remove it from the Windows 11 Start menu. You can also choose Uninstall if the app is no longer needed. Open All apps by clicking the corresponding button in the upper right corner of the Start menu to pin new things to the Start menu. Select Pin to Start from the context menu when you right-click the programme you want to pin.

How to hide recommended items

Files and apps you've recently used are displayed in the Recommended area of the Windows 11 Start menu. When you routinely access the same papers,
