

Pin or unpin, the choice is yours

this can be useful. You can, delete this section of the Start menu if you want a less cluttered appearance.

Press the Windows key + I and go to Personalization > Start to remove things from the Recommended section of the Windows 11 Start menu. Show recently opened objects in Start, Jump Lists, and File Explorer should be turned off here.

Unfortunately, you can't show recently opened things in Jump Lists or File Explorer on a per-item basis. Even if you turn them off completely, the Recommended portion of the Start menu remains accessible. It's simply empty. You can remove individual things from the Recommended area of the Start menu by right-clicking the item and selecting Remove from list.

How to see recently installed and most used programs

You should enable one or both choices if you're unclear which apps to pin to the Start menu or want a simpler way to access newly installed programmes. They appear at the top of the Start menu's All Apps list in Windows 11.

To enable recently installed and most used apps, navigate to Personalization > Start in the Settings app (Windows key + I). Now select Show recently added
