Buddi

Buddi is a personal finance and budgeting program which targets users who have a little financial background or none and need a simple, user-friendly application to help them to manage their finances. Buddi is released as open-source software which can be downloaded by anyone for free. This is an attempt to explain finance terms and jargon in a simple manner. Buddi will run on any computer which has a Java virtual machine installed on it and supports all popular operating systems like Windows, Mac OS X, Linux etc.

Why you must get it:

This application is available in different languages. There is an option for translating into another language as well. This has features of both budgeting and reporting tools. This interface has an option for budget categorisation in income and expenses and keeps track of every operation that happens inside the app as a record of the transaction. It supports four types of credit accounts
