

using Geary is very easy with only three side panels making up the user interface. It also synchronises with your Gmail labels so that your emails aren't mixed up.

SeaMonkey

SeaMonkey provides an all-in-one email suite with a powerful, fully-featured email client along with a great browser, news client and an HTML editor. It is an application that sports high security and privacy with an effective spam filtering method. This is an open-source application built by a large community of contributors. Various programmers have contributed to increasing the features of SeaMonkey which has introduced several add-ons. The program runs on very less storage and is not resource hungry.

Why you must get it:

SeaMonkey offers a fully-featured email program with good IMAP support, flexible filters, strong HTML support, powerful searching, labels, and tags for organising and prioritising mails and many other features. It is a comfortable email experience even after turning off JavaScript. The address book in the software supports vCards and Palm synchronisation, which is very helpful in restoring contacts. The effective Bayesian spam filtering technique sends all the junk to a separate folder. The message views, advanced search and search toolbar help in finding emails easily. It is a complete suite and suitable for people who hate to hoard multiple applications. d
