Xonotic

Xonotic is a fast-paced, arena-style, first-person shooting games playable on Windows, Linux, UNIX and Mac. This game is open-source, so anyone can make modifications to the code if some errors are found. It is surprising that the graphics of the game are extraordinary and outperform most commercial products. The game is conveniently direct play. Multiple accounts can be created in one game and it is built with a player stats recording feature which keeps track of each player's game progress.

Why you must get it:

This game has nine core weapons, and 16 full weapons, each with its own primary and secondary fire modes and most of them are quite useful in specific situations. These features make this game more addictive in nature. The background music is one to be heard all day. The game is quite engaging so if a player starts playing this game, they won't leave
