

structing buildings, making them more powerful and more versatile than other typical RTS games. Some technologies are arranged in pairs and within each pair, you can only research one technology at most in each game.

TripleA

TripleA is a freeware and open-source turn-based game based on an existing board game called Axis and Allies. This is a Java game and can run on every personal computer with internet access and Java SE installed on it. This software is released under GPL Company. TripleA games involve various scenarios between world powers depicted on maps of varying sizes and complexities. Many maps for individual games are historical, being primarily based on the relative strength and position of world powers leading up to the Second World War. Some maps are more fantasy oriented.

Why you must get it:

As this game comes with multiple maps, and over 100 maps can be downloaded from the user community, players find themselves facing newer challenges. If a single player is playing this game, then the opposing player will be a bot (i.e. artificial intelligence). Handling situations arising during the gameplay help people practice their analytical and logical thinking.

2048

2048 is an internet sensation game played on a 4x4 grid comprising moveable numbered tiles. The player can move the tiles using four arrow keys which will ultimately hit one of the walls of the grid. With every turn, a new tile is generated on the random tile which is empty with a value of either 2 or 4. If two tiles of the same value collide while moving, they get merged and create the added value of them. The resulting tile can't be merged with the same value in the same move. The player's score is noted in the top corner of the screen. The game will end once the board is completely full or if there are no more possible moves.

Why you must get it:

The pace of the game is decided by the player. The game is developed with an automatic saving option so that the player never loses an ongoing game if she/he leaves to do some work in the middle of the game. The size of the game is negligible, so it doesn't take up too much space on the device. This game can be played online as well as installed locally on your device. d