

User Management

Manage who uses your website and in what way

Many websites begin as one-person endeavours. However, as they grow, the admin would eventually wish to allow visitors to create their accounts or even share the WordPress dashboard with other team members.

WordPress, thankfully has a user role management system that gives the site owner control over what users can and cannot do. By giving each user a role, a site owner can control which users have access to which tasks, including writing and editing articles, managing themes, creating categories, creating Pages, managing plugins, moderating comments, and