

This will allow you to acquire the knowledge and experience necessary for being successful in the complex but essential role that you will eventually play. The following are examples of applicable classes and programmes:

- Online Course: Audio Mastering Techniques
- Professional Certificate in Advanced Music Production
- Bachelor's Degree in Music Production

5. Music Editor

It's possible that a profession as a music editor would be the perfect fit for you if, in addition to being a musician and an engineer, you're also a smart manager. The Music Editor is the person who is in charge of editing and syncing the music that is used in movies and television shows with the action that is taking place on the screen.

You will be responsible for supervising the artistic, technical, and logistical aspects of composing and placing music if you are the Music Editor on a movie or television show. You will be tasked with helping to decide where and when music will be utilised in the film or show, coordinating changes with the composer, and even creating interim soundtracks to assist with test screenings.

Being a master of logistics is not sufficient qualifications for this particular profession. A background in music is also required if you want to work with those who make soundtracks. In point of fact, music editors and composers frequently collaborate on a variety of projects simultaneously.

