

Choose A Topic

You should try to narrow the focus of your podcast to a specific field or specialty.

Try to limit it down to something that you can talk about for a significant number of episodes (at least 100), but that isn't so wide that you won't appeal to the audience you could potentially have.

As an example, rather than hosting a podcast titled “outside,” you could discuss hiking, or to be even more particular, hiking 14ers.

As your site gains more visitors, you always have the option to broaden the scope of your topic.

It is essential that you read the information in the section on picking a name to ensure that you do not restrict your options.

Pick A Co-host (optional)

Do you already have a friend, business partner, or coworker in mind with whom you could co-host an event?

If you have a co-host for your podcast, getting started might be a lot less difficult.

If you and the other person are talking about something from the same perspective, the conversation will naturally be more interesting to listen to. Having someone else around to keep things on track might also be of great assistance.
