

you will attract both new and returning listeners; therefore, you should make an effort to communicate with both groups of people.

Preparation

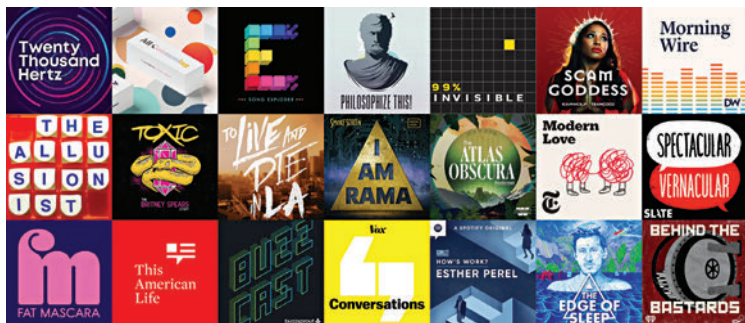

We'll need to get a few things ready before the launch, and now that you've written down your topic, format(s), and secured a domain name, you'll find that we'll need to...

Create Cover Art

The majority of consumers will get their first impression of your podcast from its cover image when they browse through Apple Podcasts or their preferred podcast software.

It's also possible that someone will view this image when you share your show on social media.

Because Buzzsprout has published a great essay regarding the design of cover art, that would be the place where one would begin their research.

You'll have access to hundreds of different designers, each of whom will generate a draft; after that, you may pick and choose which designs to have further developed based on your preferences.

Get A Professional Intro (Optional)

The finest site to obtain voiceovers and introductions of professional calibre is Music Radio Creative.

When you are first beginning a podcast, having a third party introduce you is an excellent method to stand out from the crowd since it raises the perceived value of what you have to offer.