

Controversies surrounding AI content and art

The emergence of AI technology always seems to come with its fair share of controversy, and the same can be said for AI-generated paintings. Let's take a closer look at some of the key controversies surrounding this emerging field of art.

Artists believe they are being ripped off

AI-generated paintings are causing controversy among artists who feel that their work is being ripped off without proper credit. Polish artist Greg Rutkowski has noticed that many people are posting work that is similar to his, as over 90,000 AI images have been created using his name alone.

The World Economic Forum has also weighed in on the issue, with one of its leading experts highlighting the need for ethical principles to govern AI-generated images, and for such images to abide by laws and regulations.

Artists don't think this qualifies as "art"

There is an ongoing debate regarding the legitimacy of AI-generated graphics
