

AI for Art

Picasso, meet your pixelated prodigy, Pixellaso!

Previously, it was difficult to fathom that by simply inputting a non-sensical text prompt such as “Batman shaking hands with a surreal Tom Hiddleston on the moon”, we could swiftly obtain remarkably realistic and intricate images of this scenario created by AI. However, this notion has recently become a reality. The buzz surrounding generative AI is entirely warranted, and the latest AI content generators are surpassing their predecessors.

The definition of art by many artists and art historians excludes AI-created work from being classified as art, as it centres on the modern artist as the sole source of creativity in art creation. However, the concept of art as a vehicle for personal expression by the individual artist is a recent and culturally-specific idea. For centuries, art has been created for various reasons under diverse