✉ I've read your last four magazines and loved all of them, however I wasn't too impressed with SKOAR!

The first time I bought the magazine, I thought it would be a rich source of gaming reviews, information on games, shortcuts to games, special features, etc. When I opened SKOAR! I found the Assassin's Creed poster and said, "Wow! This must be the best gaming mag." But then I bought the next issue. Though the poster in this issue was good, it had too many female characters and was of low quality. The next poster was the same.

The games covered too weren't the kind anyone would want to play, such as 'DOTA 2'. Please write about some good games (their screenshots, latest updates, shortcuts, etc) such as 'Far Cry 4' and 'Saints Row 5'.

Everything else is awesome - The epic rap battle, articles about girls who've contributed to the gaming domain, etc.

Please reply as soon as you can. Thanks.

📌 Like you, Prashant, a lot of our gaming content readers love the bundled poster along with the monthly magazine, more than the SKOAR issue itself! We have already reviewed Far Cry 4, Saints Row and DOTA 2 in the past. Check through the past issues digital archive bundled in this month's DVD.

✉ I have nothing much to say in this mail except that the website needs serious updates. Recently, I was showing my friend how useful the digit.in website is. He was looking for a phone with a budget of about Rs.22,000 or so. I suggested that we use Digit's "Find Mobiles" page. Firstly, I couldn't select all of the filters at once. The page refreshed as soon as I selected the budget! (Please fix this.)

However, the embarrassment came when the results showed up. At the top of the list was a phone which was rated 100!

(It shocked me as well) And guess which phone that was? I recommend updating this page of the website quickly so as to make finding mobiles via digit.in easy and more importantly, meaningful!

And as always, keep up the good work! One last request. I love your magazine.

Hope to hear from you.

– Vibhansh "The geek" Gupta.

📌 We're embarrassed too, and sorry to have put you in such an awkward position. But rest assured, we're working on it, Vibhansh.

✉ I'm writing to you after a long time. I really like Digit and consider it the best tech magazine in the market today. The November issue of Digit was really appealing.

Here are some points I'd like to put across:

1. The cover story was very good. I loved the comparisons. Plus, 'The Ultimate Smartphone of 2016' was the best of all. I'd really like to own a phone like that.
2. Fast Track was nice, but I don't think wearables needed a complete book. It wasn't as interesting as the previous ones. You could have used it as a cover story in a future issue.
3. I'm a huge fan of dmystify. It's an amazing concept. Don't ever discontinue it. However, justice wasn't done to the topic 'Evolution' in the November issue. It didn't focus on evolution as such. It leaned more towards the chemical aspect than the biological. It also didn't say anything about the theories regarding evolution, not even the Darwinian theory of Natural Selection, which I expected to be the most important part.
4. I'm very upset that you've reduced the number of DVDs. That wasn't a good idea because they're very useful. I await your DVDs the whole month. Please try to restore the number of DVDs.
5. I'm not a gamer, but I do like to play 'Need For Speed', one of my favorite games. Thank you for giving an NFS poster this time.
6. I believe many of Digit's readers are fiction readers. Or even writers. So why don't you dedicate a section every month for fictional short stories. It doesn't have to be more than a page.

That's all I have to say. Thank you, Digit for being in my life and making it awesome.

– Shashwat Gupta

Thanks Shashwat! We had a lot of fun working on the Ultimate Smartphone of 2016 story, too. We love Dmystify, too, and will continue to support it with all of our combined efforts as long as possible. Instead of the second DVD, we now manage to provide SKOAR and Dmystify on a monthly isn't that great. Thanks for the constructive feedback. As for fictional short stories, why don't you write one yourself, if you're interested? We may even publish it. Look forward to your next correspondence.

✉ I've been a Digit subscriber since last year and have a few questions for you. Think of the two scenarios below.

1. I'm waiting at a restaurant for my order to arrive. Now, I want to read the article I started reading at home in Digit magazine. Do we have an app to read the entire magazine digitally?
2. I remember reading an article about resumes, but can't remember in which issue it was. Wouldn't it be helpful if we had a search button to find an article that was published only in the magazine?

Apart from these, I have a couple of suggestions. It would be great to get a dmystify / Fast Track on Quantum Computing, Gravity and Virtual Reality. Also, it would be nice to have articles explaining everyday tech/devices/science. (I've been using Wi-Fi all my life but I don't know how it actually works).

P.S: Did I tell, you guys are rocking? It goes without saying, bro.

📌 Want to read entire magazine in digital format? More on that soon. Very, very soon. Meanwhile use Foxit to search through folders, scan this month's DVDs as we have past issues available in PDF format. Thanks!
