

Sennheiser Orpheus

Headphones so good, they might just make you cry

There's hardly anyone on earth who would argue against the quality of the legendary Orpheus which was launched back in 1991, priced at around ₹10 lakh. Now, more than two decades later, Sennheiser has launched an updated Orpheus, skyrocketing the price to a breath-taking ₹36 lakh. Yes, take a minute to let that sink in. Although the blindingly crazy price isn't only for the headphones but with the tube amplifier and DAC combined, it sure does make one go back to ensuring whether they read the right amount of zeroes in the price. "Is it freakin made of gold?" some would ask. Well it is made of platinum (at least the diaphragms are - 2.4 micron platinum). What else, you ask? The Quartz tube bulbs are encased in Italian marble! Now that's something.

Cipollini BOND

The perfect Italian love child?

What happens when a supercar manufacturer and an iconic bike manufacturer have a love child together? What happens if they both are Italian? The offspring is an elegant piece of craftsmanship exuding class and luxury. Maserati and Cipollini came together to make the Cipollini BOND road bike possible. It boasts a patented construction for the primary triangular monocoque along with the rear axle fitting, called as the Atomlink. The same 54cm frame is said to be quite sturdy, offering a considerable amount of resistance to stress. The appealing bike is covered with a blue and white paintjob, branded with the trident Maserati logo. For those interested in the important technical specifications of the bike, it consists of an Ultegra mechanical groupset, a rigid looking Selle San Marco Aspide racing saddle and Fast Forward F2A alloy clinchers fitted with 25mm tyres. The bike will be retailing somewhere around the price of ₹4.5 lakhs.

APP WATCH

Signal

If you are the tinfoil wearing kind, living under the constant fear of surveillance, Signal is a highly secure communication app for you. Coming from Open Whisper Systems, the app ensures that none of your messages are intercepted while in transit. You can allow the app to replace your default messaging app and securely lock the app with a passphrase. Free calls and texts can be exchanged within the app with other Signal users, acting as a regular IM service with support for sending and receiving multimedia content. If you don't want to take our word for how secure Signal is, perhaps it would comfort you know that even Snowden recommends using it.

App Store: <http://dgit.in/SignaliOS>

Play Store: <http://dgit.in/SignalAnd>

Fitso

If you've always wanted to do something about your constantly devolving fitness level, but never had the right kind of motivation, perhaps Fitso is what you've always been looking for. Pitched as an app to bring together fitness enthusiasts with professionals near you, Fitso features several useful sections. Activities will allow you to discover running and cycling meets conducted around you while Events does the same for any kind of a fitness event. Professional users can also post short articles on specific topics such as Yoga, Diet, Running etc and the regular users will be able to refer and employ those habits in their daily lives.

Play Store: <http://dgit.in/FitsoAnd>

Prepathon

There are numerous websites and apps to take courses on specialised subjects. There are hardly any services which offer subjects falling under entrance tests and the ones that do, aren't really doing a great job in offering a seamless learning and browsing experience. Prepathon has a user-friendly UI with sections including Learn, Discuss and Coach. Under Learn you can browse all the tests available under your selected course (CAT, IBPS, JEE, SSC). The Discuss section will let you post your queries or scroll through queries posted by other users. You'll also have access to a personal coach who will guide you and answer any type of doubts you have related to the courses. And the best part, everything is free.

Play Store: <http://dgit.in/Prepathon>