Garmin Forerunner 735XT

The watch for your multi-sporting needs

Hover Camera

Beijing-based startup Zero Robotics have come up with the Hover Camera. As the name suggests, this drone is primarily meant for aerial photography and video making. In addition to being foldable for extra portability, it also has the "Follow me" feature which is new in drones. Thanks to the strong carbon fiber frame that enclose the propellers, this drone is extremely safe. The device should be around the $600 (₹40,400 approx) price tag when it releases.

The Forerunner 735XT is Garmin's latest sports watch which is designed for athletes who play multiple sports, specifically triathlons. The Forerunner features a built-in optical heart-rate sensor, a tracker which tracks things like the number of steps you've taken and the number of calories you've managed to burn all day, and an active GPS. The Forerunner can show you notifications on your Android smartphones or your iPhones as well. You can access all of Garmin's third party apps at their app store, the Connect IQ, which will let you download watch faces, widgets, and apps for the watch. What makes the Forerunner 735XT stand out is that it can track cycling, swimming, hiking, cross country skiing, strength training, paddle boarding, and cardio in addition to running.

It also comes with a feature that lets you automatically change sports profiles whenever you switch sports, such as with triathlons where you switch between running, swimming and cycling. If all this is not enough, another notable feature that comes with the Forerunner is the Strava Live Suffer Score app, which will come preinstalled with the watch. Your Suffer Score is determined by calculating your heartbeat and telling you how intense your workout session was. This watch, like every Garmin watch, is water resistant. As it should be, since it'll be worn while swimming as well. The Forerunner 735XT is priced at $450 (₹30,300 approx).

SkyBell HD Wi-Fi

At the $200 (₹13,500 approx) price tag this Video Doorbell more affordable than its pricier counterparts. This $70 (₹4,700) alternative is designed only for the iPhone 6 and 6s or the Samsung Galaxy S7.

Boosted Board
