

1 House hunting - nobroker, Zenify

One relocates to a new city or house for various reasons, ranging from a new job to the beginning of a 'happily' married life, but irrespective of how positive the reason might be, the vicious circle of brokers, restrictive landlords and changing terms make the whole experience one of the worst landmarks of your life. Thanks to startups like NoBroker and Zenify, you have a few ways out of that web now, with the help of broker free listings and detailed property characteristics. This is a great relief for all young professionals who have to move cities to advance their careers!

4 Local household services - UrbanClap, Taskbob, Mr. Right

Trying to find a household help or a local repairman through your building's security guard or neighbours might be harder than you think. You have no way to tell the quality of their services, other than word of mouth. Enter services like UrbanClap, Taskbob and Mr. Right, who have taken up the job of connecting you with professionals for tasks ranging from cleaning to repairs. So, instead of hiring a full time caretaker, you can actually go for the per-requirement approach and save your money along the way.

5 Travel - Ridesharing, cab services, car rentals, driver for hire, bus bookings

If there is one sector that has clearly benefited the most from India's startup boom, it is travel. On demand Cab services like Uber and Ola have become second nature to us, and ride-sharing services like sRide and BlaBlaCar are catching up really fast. And if you are planning a long drive and need a driver for the same, try Zuver, a driver-on-demand app. Just in case you want to drive yourself but lack the wheels, car rentals like Zoomcar and JustRide have your back covered.

2 Food - Swiggy

Food ordering startups are not entirely new to the Indian market. With Foodpanda and TinyOwl already in the same sector, it was quite a surprise when Swiggy climbed up the ranks rapidly. A big factor in this is the ease of use. Website or app, just log in, let the app detect your location and show you the restaurants and eateries around you. With no minimum order amount, the options range from local juice centres to premium eateries.

3 Furnishing - rentomojo, furlenco

The price difference between renting a furnished and unfurnished house has prompted a significant rise in furniture rental services. Rentomojo and Furlenco are your best options if you're looking to do the same. These rentals have free installation and free relocation services, along with a wide array of options from furniture to appliances to home decor. One of the best features on these sites are their package offerings which are good enough for an overall furnishing of your room or house.
