

1 Social Awkwardness

Social media is gradually making us all socially awkward. It's true. We're far too comfortable talking to people online. There's no need to leave the confines of our homes anymore, or interact with people physically. Granted that social media is a great way to connect people, but at the same time, it could also be the reason that people drift apart.

2 Selfies

Oh dear god, the Selfie. It's beyond us how the selfie phenomenon became as big as it did, but here we are. Everywhere you look there's someone or the other taking a selfie. With their food, with their "SO", in their vehicle, at the zoo, at the movies, the list goes on. It's gotten to the point where people are actually dying while taking a selfie. Definitely ruinous for society.

3 We'd rather record than experience

People are obsessed with sharing everything they do, on social media.. Everyone wants to impress their friends and followers, make them jealous. It's gotten to the point where people are so focused on capturing the moment on camera or in video that they completely forget about the experience itself. People on vacation at the beach are too focused trying to capture the perfect picture of their feet and the beach than actually enjoying the waves themselves.

4 We're in front of screen 24x7

No matter what time of the day it is, or wherever it is that you are, you always have some sort of the screen or gadget on you. No matter what be reason, for making calls, or passing the time, or playing games etc. At our homes as well, we're always either in front of a desktops, laptops, or our tablets. Fact of the matter is we're always glued to our screens.

5 We're chained to sockets (chargers)

We're slaves to our technology. Literally. We are shackled to electricity sockets by chargers and power cords. It's like phone companies today want us to stay at home with the tiny battery life phones have these days. If you see a gathering of teenagers, staring into their phones, you can safely assume that there's a power source near by.

6 Cameras EVERYWHERE (somebody's always watching)

We don't mean in the NSA sense, not that that's any better. In addition to selfie crazed people taking pictures left right and centre, there's video cameras, surveillance cameras, something-or-the-other cameras etc everywhere. Even consoles come with webcams now. You never know who's watching. While these are mostly for security purposes and in some cases it's more than justified, there is such a thing as overdoing it. And just like that, privacy is a thing of the past. Well not entirely but we're almost there. Sigh.

15 WAYS TECHNOLOGY HAS RUINED US FOREVER

TECHNOLOGY HAS BEEN A MAJOR PART OF OUR LIVES. HERE'S 15 WAYS IN WHICH IT HAS BEEN SECRETLY RUINING US.
