

7 Evernote web clipper

The Evernote Web Clipper sends web pages to Evernote with the app's Web Clipper. Websites, articles and notes can be read later with the save button. You can even highlight text from any website or article, and highlight text to draw attention.

8 StumbleUpon

A great way to discover new material and diversify what you view on the web, allow StumbleUpon to recommend content to you, based on your interests and preferences. Makes for a great extension if you want to get as much juice as you can from the interwebs.

9 HTTPS Everywhere

Sometimes, the easiest hacks are the ones we tend to forget the most. If you're huge on privacy and security and want to make sure your data is encrypted before being delivered across the internet, just add "https://" before the URL. Or, let HTTPS Everywhere do that for you. And since the Tor Project is a collaborator in this, you know it's an important extension to have.

10 TunnelBear

If you're big on Spotify but can't access it because your nationality gets in the way, TunnelBear provides a secure VPN to help you work around the restrictions. It's a big boon for those worried about using public networks or being tracked online. And considering this extension has a full 5 stars on the Chrome Web Store, it's a trusted extension that never fails to deliver.

11 Mailtrack

According to the creators of this extension, "MailTrack.io is an email tracking app that lets you know if the messages you send have been read or not." At the moment, it works only with Gmail and Google Apps for Work. The extension allows you to see which messages have been read, how long ago, how many times and which device they were opened on.

12 Adblock Plus

One of the most popular adblockers on the Chrome web store, Adblock Plus blocks ALL annoying ads, malware and tracking, and also supports websites by not blocking unobtrusive ads by default (configurable). A win-win situation.

13 Todoist

If you're an OCD freak and need to have clear lists maintained at all times, the Todoist extension can be the miracle you've been looking for. The extension allows you to create, add, delete, organize and modify lists from the comforts of your browser. You can even share your lists or tasks with others, such as family members or friends, for 'collaborative task accomplishment'. It even doubles up as a Pocket replacement, though with lesser functionality (allows only websites to be saved as tasks at the moment).

Keepa simplifies tracking product prices listed on Amazon. The extension adds a small graphical chart directly on Amazon's product listing page itself. This chart gives you detailed information about price history, price drops, trends etc. Don't be put off by the not-so-great design of the graphs, they in no way compromise on the data that Keepa provides. You can also set up availability and pricing alerts for it to track and notify you of a product when its price drops below your desired price.

15 Grammarly

Get a helping hand with your writing from Grammarly, a dictionary plug in that claims to find and correct up to 10 times more mistakes than a normal word processor. The Grammarly extension vets your spellings and grammar on nearly any website which involves writing, ensuring a mistake free write up.
