

1 Knoword

(www.knoword.org)

We all like to believe we've got rich vocabularies, amassed over decades of diligent reading. If you want to combine some clever word games with your ninja keyboard skills, check out Knoword. The website lets you test your vocabulary skills by guessing a word based on its dictionary definition (and the first letter of the word), while a timer ticks away in the background. For every word you answer correctly, you win a few seconds; make a mistake or skip a word, and you lose a few.

The game ends when the timer runs out. You can also choose to play with world capitals instead for some extra nerd cred. Go ahead, give this a try!

4 Drinkify

(<http://drinkify.org/>)

Few things in life go as well together as a good drink and a good song. Drinks here don't necessarily mean alcohol, of course, it can be soft drinks, too. Having your favourite band playing at a night out at the bar makes the drink taste that much better, so it's only fitting that we have a guide on the best drinks to accompany your favourite bands. Drinkify does exactly that – enter the name of a band in the search box, and the site will suggest the best drink to go along with the music, even giving you the exact recipe for the cocktail. As a bonus, the site will also start playing a playlist of the artist's songs in the background as it shows you its recommendation. We tried entering a few bands and met with some interesting results – the site recommended a bottle of box wine to go with Pink Floyd and a Macallan neat to go with John Mayer!

2 Got Rhythm?

(<http://www.concerthotels.com/got-rhythm>)

Being the drummer of a band is probably the coolest job there is (sorry, lead guitarists), but it's not all about pounding every surface in your vicinity. Keeping correct time is the most crucial part of a drummer's job - the whole band depends on it! Take a sneak peek into what it means to be a drummer with "Got Rhythm?" - a webapp that tests how well you can maintain a steady beat. You have to click your mouse in response to a metronome that plays a beat at 120bpm.

3 Listen to Wikipedia

(<http://listen.hatnote.com/>)

The 'Listen to Wikipedia' project though, is the most innovative one we've seen so far - it shows you Wikipedia being edited in real time (a feat in itself), and generates a unique musical sound for each edit, or every time a new user joins the site. Wikipedia receives a few every edits every second, and each such edit is represented by a ripple, with the size of the ripple depending on the length of the article being edited. It's a strange and beautiful concept that results in some relaxing music.

15 TIME-WASTING WEBSITES YOU SHOULD KNOW OF

THE INTERNET IS THE GREATEST TOOL FOR PROCRASTINATION THERE IS, AND IF YOU'D RATHER KILL TIME STARING AT YOUR SCREEN THAN BE PRODUCTIVE, DIGIT'S GOT YOUR BACK. HERE'S A LIST...

BY PAANINI NAVILEKAR
feedback@digit.in