Unwind

How we unwind

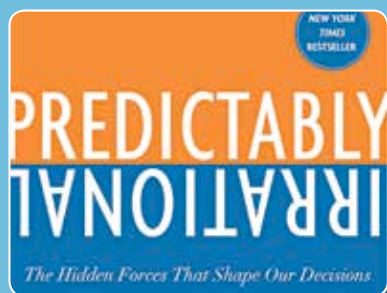

A Strange Murakami

In his quest for higher levels of enlightenment, this month Arnab picked up 'The Strange Library' by Haruki Murakami. According to him, it initially appears to be a children's picture book, but soon takes a turn for the dark and maintains that dark undertone throughout. And a confusing ending. Well, it says 'Strange' in the title!

Predictably Irrational

A fan of psychobabble, Sid's audible pick for the month is yet another book that highlights how flawed human decision making can be. The book uses examples from real life to drive the point, but what makes it different from other efforts in behavioural economics is its claim that we can actually predict our unpredictability.

Pokémon Hoes

Abhijit, Arnab, Manish and Mithun all found themselves veering towards Pokémon GO, much to the chagrin of Siddharth and Jayesh who had no idea what was going on. For that matter neither did Mithun, but it didn't really matter because he went as far as researching pokémon locations online and even looking up guides.

diGit DIARY

The otherwise overtly cautious Mithun was careless, and left his Facebook logged in on the phone we use for live videos. Nikhil happened to find out that our dear friend Mithun has opted to hide everything he posts from a select few people here in the office, namely Sid, Jayesh, Nikhil and Abhijit.

Poor Abhijit, we could only imagine the betrayal he felt, the guy was visibly crestfallen. Siddharth wasn't one to waste an opportunity such as this one so a status was posted, something along the lines of desperately needing a hug. Clearly upset by Mithun's act of betrayal, retaliation came in the form of invitations to the lobby, immediately followed by an "accidental" kick.

Another interesting thing we've discovered is that we have a closet Chetan Bhagat fan among us. Siddharth happened to receive a few Amazon giftcards from undisclosed sources, which he immediately used to purchase a copy of Half Girlfriend. He of course claims he did it by accident, but all of us know better.

Arnab happened to celebrate his 25th-1 birthday this month, as is custom we religiously brought out a cake and generously smeared most of it over his face. Arnab, knowing full well that this would happen came prepared with an extra t-shirt, always knew he was a smart boy. Mithun as usual went ahead and wrote "25" on his forehead with cake icing, only to later realise that the guy had just turned 24, not 25.

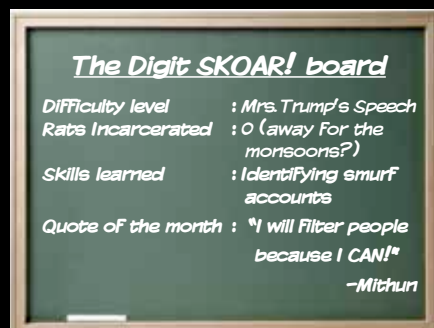

Onto our Counter Strike escapades. This month most of us hit that coveted Gold Nova rank, it was only once we got there that we realised how out-classed we were over here. Now it's not just Abhijit but all of us spending our spare time watching CS:GO videos in order to improve our game. Siddharth even managed to hit Nova 2, but it was too much for him and he was soon brought back to reality. He blames us for his deranking because we're just not as "skilled" as he is.

We got a boat load of graphic cards to benchmark this month, and while some of you may think "that's the dream", Mithun will tell you otherwise. Benchmarking all them cards is no easy feat, even if everything does look super amazing in 4k on huge screens.

Our star intern Mehul was also awol for most of the month, and whenever he did show up, seemed like it was solely to play counter strike. He was supposedly busy with classes and some such and therefore couldn't make it.

Arnab tried his hand at working out after installing a new fitness app. It only took him a few days to realise that working out wasn't really working out for him and he raised his hands (or rather dropped them) in surrender.

After much struggle and tinkering with the .ini files and fidgeting around with the resolution, Arnab finally got Star Wars: Knights of the Old Republic running on his system, a great game for his return to the world of gaming. Welcome back rusty warrior! We hope you thoroughly enjoy yourself.
