LaFerrari Spider

Before starting off, let's break the bad news that the limited edition LaFerrari Spider has already been sold out, even though it hasn't released yet. But you and I aren't really sad about it now, are we?. Revealing a sold-out vehicle is an impressive move to establish their appeal among car enthusiasts. While rumours have been circling around for a refresh of the LaFerrari to a more expensive version and the 2017 version is a hybrid without a roof.

There's nothing new under the hood since it retains a total of 949-horsepower through its hybrid V12 engine, along with an electric motor and battery pack from the LaFerrari series but the exclusive version has design upgrades in the chassis and aerodynamics to boost performance. With the insane power delivered through the engine, it still attains the position of being one of the rarest cars in the world. And as for whether it's among the fastest cars in the world, we'll have to wait it out until the high-profile owners hit the roads. Without the roof seen in the regular version, the car is said to be priced at around $1.4 million but it's too late if someone was considering it as their next toy to brag about.
