

an excuse for losing, whatever. Anyway, she tells Dante that the Demon Emperor Mundus has decided to return and rule over the world. Typical Demon Emperor. Also, remember that mother and brother of his who were killed? Turns out it was this Mundus dude who did that too.

Among the bosses Dante faces, Nelo Angelo repeatedly faces and fights Dante throughout the game. Nelo flees when he notices the half amulet that Dante wears. As we progress through the game we soon learn that Nelo Angelo is actually Vergil, Dante's assumedly dead twin brother. Anyway, Angelo/Vergil is corrupt and is being controlled by Mundus and they have no choice but to fight each other. After Vergil's death, Dante combines both halves of the amulet and his sword, the Force Edge, changes to reveal its true form – The Sparda Sword.

After just having lost his brother, he runs into Trish, and finds out that she too has betrayed him and is working for Mundus herself. However, when she's in trouble he chooses to save her, and said he only did so because she resembled his mother. However, later when he finally confronts Mundus, he saves Trish from Mundus again. Trish repays Dante by saving him when Mundus is about to finish him off by taking the attack in his stead. This triggers Dante and allows him to use his Devil Trigger and take on the form of Sparda. After he defeats Mundus he leaves the amulet and the sword with Trish's body. However, Demon Emperor's can be quite persistent, and Mundus isn't too happy with the results of the last fight. However, Dante doesn't have the sword anymore and can't use his Devil Trigger either, quite the pickle he's in there. But Trish makes a comeback and lends Dante her power after which he beats Mundus again. Of course he vows to return and rule the world, but that's what they all say. Anyway she breaks down crying and Dante tells her she's part human now, because "devils never cry". And so they escape and run a demon hunting business called "Devil Never Cry".

DMC2 introduces players to another playable character, Lucia. Lucia is a Devil Hunter as well, quite like Dante himself. And she can Devil Trigger, or take on a demon form like Dante too. So this Lucia person belongs to a clan called the Vie De Marli – which we're going to abbreviate to VDM because it's a hassle to type that out every time – which consists of people with the 'blood of devils'. Which probably means they're all half-demon folk like Dante.

Lucia invites Dante to Dumary island – VDM HQ – where Dante meets Lucia's adoptive mother, Matier. Turns out Matier fought demons alongside Sparda and she wanted Lucia to bring Dante – or as she calls him, "Son of Sparda" – here to help out with a demon problem they were having.

So the bad dude this time is called Arius, and he's an international businessman who's using demonic powers to conquer the world (what? they weren't kidding when they said DMC2's plot was weak).

Arius' plan is to raise the demon Argosax, for which he needs certain items, called the Arcana. Lucia confronts him to stop him, but lo and behold, plot twist! Turns out Lucia was actually called Chi, and Arius made her. But she was apparently defective and he had no use for her so she was abandoned. She is unable to defeat him and he blasts her away, she finds Dante and gives him the remnant of the Arcana we just mentioned. Dante takes the Arcana to Matier who, in turn, asks him to take the Arcana and go save Lucia who has gone after Arius again.

Once he gets there he sees that Lucia has been captured and so he trades the Arcana for Lucia, but still kicks Arius' ass. Arius however, the scumbag that he is, forces Dante to choose between killing him or saving Lucia. Anyway, Dante chases Arius and stops him halfway through his ritual and finishes him off. But it doesn't end there, a portal to the demon world opens and Argosax is not very happy about the unfinished ritual. Dante heads off into the portal to deal with the half-summoned Argosax.

Anyway, Arius wasn't done, he's back, and he has demonic powers now. There's no Dante to fight him this time so it's up to Lucia, but she manages just fine and defeats him. Meanwhile, Dante beats Argosax inside the portal, but it's been closed off now and he's stuck inside the demon realm. So now since he's stuck in there he decides to go further into the demon

