TV SHOW

Stranger Things

If Super 8 was a TV show

It's been a really long time since we've actually binge-watched through an entire TV show. A lot of hype surrounded this new sci-fi series called Stranger Things and our trusted sources have confirmed it is definitely worth our precious time. The entire show is based on the 80's so you can expect a retro themed setting, which they've pulled off beautifully by the way. Right from the cars, hair-cuts, and the clothes, they have wonderfully recreated the retro feel by shadowing the entire show with an equally amazing playlist. The effort taken by The Duffer Brothers, creators of the show, is clearly visible throughout the show. Most of us here binge-watched the entire show because we were so eager to find out what happens next. It wasn't until the third and fourth episode that we finally realised the main plot, and although it got monotonous from this point, it picked up pace as we got closer to the end. The show builds up really well and we hardly noticed any plot holes, and we highly recommend you watch it right away. And about the leader above, if you've watched the movie Super 8, you'll know what we are talking about here.

MOVIE

Suicide Squad

Harley Quinn takes it away

Since the time Suicide Squad was announced, it had us wondering who would be cast as what. Heath Ledger's legendary performance as The Joker set the bar quite high. Although Jared Leto portrayed a different kind of a Joker, we think that it's too soon to judge, owing to the negligible amount of screen time he received. But he did look promising, with the right combination of being psychotic (introducing a new maniacal laugh) and being a thug. Margot Robbie as Harley Quinn has to be the best thing coming from the movie. We cannot imagine anyone else doing it better. Her portrayal adhered to the crazy and chirpy character that she has been presented as in the comics and the animated movies. Will Smith played the role of Deadshot and enjoyed most of the screen time, with his own background story where Batman (Ben Affleck) makes a brief appearance. On the whole, it wasn't all that bad in our opinion. Now, you'd be thinking if the movie was good why did it receive such a huge backlash? According to us, some of the outrage is justified. For instance, through the movie, it was evident that the final cut went through a lot of edits, failing to maintain a cohesive story. Rather it looked like different movies stitched together with bad CGI effects. Most of the punchlines were dropped by Smith and Robbie, where the humour looked forced just to turn it into a funny movie. Humour is obviously welcome in any movie, but it isn't really necessary. The story was weak and even the villain (which was a surprise) wasn't fascinating enough. There's a lot to talk about the movie where it fails and where it succeeds but unfortunately we have space constraints. If you're a DC Comics fan, there's nothing stopping you from watching this movie. If you're not, Margot's performance and the overall fun of watching superheroes showing off their insane abilities should suffice to consider watching this movie.
