B&O BeoSound 1

Band & Olufsen's BeoSound 1 looks like a work of modern art, and the best part is it sounds as good as it looks. According to B&O their reason for the cylindrical design is for 360 degrees of sound. The BeoSound is equipped with the latest Google Cast, Bluetooth, AirPlay, and DLNA technologies. If you've got other B&O products, it can pair up with them. The BeoSound 1 has a battery life of upto 16 hours, while it's larger counterpart, the BeoSound 2 runs off main.

Acer Predator 21X

An Acer like none other

Acer is no stranger when it comes to making gaming laptops. But we can guarantee you that NOTHING they've ever made is anything quite like this one. The Acer Predator 21X is a behemoth, where you can take the word 'behemoth' literally. This monster houses two GTX 1080s (TWO!), a 21-inch curved display – yes CURVED – and a mechanical keyboard to boot. This beast is massive, and weighs a whopping 8kgs, so you're not going to be lugging it around. You need two power supplies to juice those two 1080s inside. The mechanical keyboard uses Cherry MX switches, there's RGB backlighting under each key. The keyboard also has macro keys to the left, for your specialised gaming needs. To add to that the Predator 21X comes with Tobii's eye-tracking, which tracks your eyes movements and changes camera angles accordingly, so you can actually aim with your eyes. Acer says they'll start shipping next year but we don't know when or for how much. It's safe to assume it'll cost a small fortune.
