

MOBILE MADNESS

You have to try these games out on your smartphone!

By Anusha 'Trillian' Sinha

Little Big City 2

Little Big City 2 is the latest iteration of the ever popular city building game. The basics of the game remain the same; you build a city from scratch, essentially trading in time for resources. The graphics in this game are gorgeous and approach the quality in SimCity Buildit, the leader of this category. One innovative twist is the ability to decide whether you want to build a futuristic city, an industrial city or an artistic city. The game will delight fans of this genre.

However, if city builders are not for you, stay away. Also, compared to Sim City or Cities Skyline, this will remain deeply unsatisfactory because it is closer to FarmVille than it is to those legends. Little Big City 2 is good for a quick fix of low maintenance city building. There are even a few mini-games incorporated within the game.

The storyline and characters are mildly interesting. The citizens and local businesses need some resources. Play this game for what is the most complete city-building experience on the mobile platform.

Bowmasters

Bowmasters, surprise surprise, is about mastering the mighty bow and arrow. The mechanics of the game are fairly simple, quite similar to Pocket Tanks. One touch controls allow you to regulate the angle and power of your shot. As with other games like this, it boils down to some clever estimation and trial and error. .

Now, coming to how the game looks, the game features a cartoon like design and is rather reminiscent of 'Dumb Ways to Die' with its imagery of happy characters dying gruesome deaths. This game however, features a more diverse set of characters ranging from a Storm Trooper to Walter Black (the one who cooks). Also, each of these has a unique weapon. As in, Walter throws a bottle of acid and Dr. Mick, a mad scientist, uses a syringe.

The game has several modes which allow you to play against the computer or pass and play. Two of the other modes are one where you hunt birds and one where you shoot a fruit perched atop someone's head and hope you don't kill them. The interface, like everything else in this, is undeniably slick.

Tuber Simulator

If, while watching numerous YouTube videos, it has ever occurred to you that you could be a YouTuber, Tuber Simulator is the game for you. Created by PewDiePie after the success of his earlier 'Legend of the Brofist', Tuber Simulator allows you to build a virtual following, create videos, earn money and spend it on cool gadgets and stuff for your room. You have control of a character who mostly sits in a room in front of their computer. You can create different videos by putting in resources and it is also up to you to decide the content of your video according to prevailing trends. The game also includes a minigame called Puggle (no points for guessing what that is inspired by).

There is a social part to the game where you can show off your room on social media and compete with friends. The game is populated by characters that will be familiar to anyone who watches PewDiePie's videos. Play this game if you like clickers, PewDiePie or pugs.