ILDOCK

No headphone jack, no problem

While many people are debating whether Apple's decision of removing the audio jack was a brave move, it has been the brunt of many jokes all over the internet. Whatever be the reason for Apple to do away with the audio jack, the ILDOCK has you covered. It stands for iPhone Lightning DOCK which has a 3.5 mm headphone jack and a lightning charging port. This means you can now listen to your favourite songs while you charge your iPhone at the same time. The ILDOCK also comes with a variant that has two lightning ports instead of the 3.5 mm audio jack, in case you want to listen to songs with your significant other, who also has lightning earpods. The ILDOCK

Plus variant provides ports for SD/TF cards and USB as well, so you can read pictures from flash cards and connect your phone to USB drives with this variant. You don't need to install any software or drivers, or need any prerequisites to use the ILDOCK, simply plug and play. Don't worry about the ILDOCK looking out of place, it's made with aircraft grade Aluminum and has four colour variants to choose from, to best match with your iPhone. It's small, it's light, and it enables you to use the audio jack, what more do you need?

Motion Code

65 percent of card fraud occurs during "card-not-present" or CNP transactions. Oberthur Technologies have come up with Dynamic Security Code cards called Motion Code that have a mini-screen on the back. It displays a three digit security code used for online purchases. This number automatically and randomly refreshes every hour, so if the card data gets stolen, it'll be useless in just an hour. There's no button to press, or plugin to install, it's easy, fully transparent and more secure.

Daydream View

Google's first headset, the Daydream VR is compatible with any phone that supports Daydream. Google worked with clothing designers to make it "soft and cozy".

Chromecast Ultra

The upgraded Chromecast

comes with HDR support, Dolby Vision, and 4k content. It works the same, plug it into your TV and cast, November as well.

Google WiFi

Google's new router, simply dubbed Google Wifi, is a multi-point network system. So you can place the router modularly at various locations throughout the house to maximise coverage.

Google Home

The Google Home was announced way back in May which has quite a few new smart assistant features and is designed to work with several units within one household.
