SECURITY

If you are carrying out your business and related actions on your smart-phone, you should be aware that it is very important to keep your phone secure at all times. Here are a few tips from Team Digit:

- Always use the most secure screen lock on your phone.
- Do not connect to Public Wi-Fi networks from the business device.
- Keep separate accounts for personal and business communication.
- Do not open unidentified or suspicious attachments with emails on your business profile.
- Always take backups of all the data in any of the apps that you might be using for your business

Chartered Accountants don't come cheap. Not to say that they can be replaced entirely, but there is an app that could bring you a long way and that is Quickbooks. While you need to set up an Intuit account initially and choose the trial subscription first, you will need the desktop to chose that. But once that is done, you're set. You can link your bank account to the app so that your transactions can be tracked and categorised. You can also create invoices for specific customers, set deadlines on them, generate professional looking invoices based on the customer details, task details and company details that you have entered and send the same directly to their email IDs. And that's a very tiny portion of what the app can do in its entirety. It is not a free app but the price is entirely justified if you can use it to its full potential.

Conferencing - ZOOM Cloud Meetings

Some communication has to be carried out face to face to avoid confusion and misinterpretation. Unfortunately, if you're running a mobile business that involves most of your partners and employees being on the move most of the times, this might be a problem, along with the need for an office space. With better connectivity and faster internet speeds, we can turn to video conferencing apps for a way out of this issue and ZOOM Cloud meetings is a great option for that. The free version of the platform allows 50 participants on a call that can be 40 minutes long at the maximum. For a one-on-one meeting there is no limit on the meeting duration. You can join a meeting by the meeting ID and once in, it offers additional enterprise options like sharing attachments, dropbox files and more. You can create groups inside the app for quick meetings. The meetings are quite seamless and did not provide any hitches when we tried it out. Go for this if you're looking for a hassle-free conferencing service that links to your phone number, your Google account, your Facebook account, and also lets you host proper conferences (with a slight restriction on length), all for free.

Card scanning - CamCard

When was the last time you had to find a contact in your pile of business cards and you didn't have a confusing, harrowing, slow time while you were at it? Also from the same developers as CamScanner, CamCard is the way you should be dealing with business cards in the 21st century. Just scan the card using the 'Capture' button and let the app extract all the details from the card and assign them to appropriate fields quite accurately, where all you need to do is hit the 'Add to Contacts' button to save the details like you would save any other contact on your smartphone, without stepping out of the app even once. The app also has some additional features that could come in handy, like multiple ways to exchange your e-card and even linking your social profiles to the app. That makes it a place where people can find out more about you directly on the app, just by using your card. Don't blame us if this makes you forget your precious card holder.
