You can now hack your iPad to simulate the Touch Bar features of the new MacBook Pro <http://dgit.in/ipadhck>

✉ Why don't you provide any of your apps on Windows Phone, it seems like you are banning Windows Phone on your office campus. I bought my windows phone by reading your articles about Windows Phone and it seems like you are cheating me. Please start any of your apps on windows phone.

4 Windows Phone has always been recommended by us as a good option for those looking for simplicity. Over time though Android has morphed itself into a simple OS that can scale with the needs of a power user. Windows Phone hasn't been able to keep up. Don't get us wrong, Windows Phone is still very good for simple UI performance. But, the lack of developer support and apps keeps us from recommending Windows Phones anymore, and leaves very little to write about. When both iOS and Android offer so much more why wouldn't we cater to them? Plus in terms of installed user base it only makes sense to concentrate on the more popular OSes out there.

Even Microsoft shows little interest in Windows-based phones nowadays, which further reduces the content that we can create around it.

✉ Greetings Digit!

I am Snehit Sah from New Delhi. I am 14 and have been reading Digit since the past year. When I was 3 or 4 years old, I used to play Road Rash on my PC. My earliest memories are those of my father opening up the PC cabinet and meticulously cleaning it. Over the years I got to know more about technology and soon also started learning web designing. The FastTracks from the Digit archive have helped me a lot to learn languages. I first read Digit in my school library and got hooked. I asked my father to subscribe to the mag, and amazingly he did it the very first day. Trust me, it's very lucky to have a dad who never screams at you to be either an engineer or a doctor. Since then I have read a lot about guys building custom PCs and fiddling with CPU insides (Sangharsh?), which makes me pretty nostalgic about the good old days. Digit also inspired me to start my own YouTube channel (Computer DudeSnehit). Thanks to you guys, I know what must go into a good channel. Some suggestions:

Feedback for the November 2016 issue of Digit

1. If you feature some software in the mag, give it in the DVD too
2. Thanks for all the distros!
3. Sid, Jayesh and Robert: All of you have got something interesting to discuss and all three are the best.
4. Only three guys can look nice without hair – Anupam Kher, Brodha V and (obviously) Robert. But, shouldn't you smile some more?
5. I missed the Space Age section. Even though it was there in the contents, I couldn't find it.
6. Special mention: 15 men and 1 woman. I am unbiased now
7. Agent 001, you are missing the limelight that the three leaders (SRJ) enjoy. Come-into-the-limelight!

4 Hey Snehit!

First of all so nice of you to remember Sangharsh wink wink. Now about your suggestions - all awesome ones. Abhijit, our DVD guy, has already taken note of the suggestion to bundle relevant software. The SRJ trinity is pleased and also sad that there will be no more SRJ :-(Also Robert probably has no idea who Brodha V is. Neither do I!

✉ Hey guys and girls, I'm just one of the millions of people in your fan base. Okay, that may be an underestimation, but you know what I mean. I started reading your magazine about a year ago. I saw Digit on the shelf and felt it stood out from the others. All other mags were about word processing, spreadsheets and other boring stuff. But you, kind sirs and madams, you have made a magazine that was actually, in my crude words, a manifestation of pure computer awesomeness!

Time to get serious: I didn't get the October issue yet while I already got the November one. Please look into it.

As for improvements to your magazine, I have none, except to put SKOAR! back outside the magazine. As for the poster, I'd really like a Witcher 3 poster. And please forgive my over usage of fancy english, I just like to use the computer.

(Yeah! PC Master Race!)

P.S Just in case I win, I want a Digit hoodie pls pls pls pls.
