

WINNERS SMARTPHONES

We've seen everything there is to see in the smartphone market this year. To be very honest, 2016 has been somewhat boring for the smartphone market. Barring Samsung's Note 7 fiasco, there was really nothing that was mind-blowing (see what we did there?).

However, boring doesn't mean there haven't been good phones. From the new iPhones, right down to the very bottom of the food chain, the smartphone market did evolve this year, as it does every year. They identified dual-cameras as the future of smartphone photography, while the modular concept finally gained some relevance. We attended Google's Pixel launch, while the iPhone 7 and 7 Plus were in our hands the day they launched in India. The Xiaomi Redmi Note 3 was one of the first truly disruptive phones this year, while LeEco's entry into India gave us something new to write about.

Amidst all this, we even reviewed the Xiaomi Mi Mix, just a few days ago, identifying what may be another step in the future of smartphones. You can read that one in the Bazaar section of the magazine.

Zero1, though, is all about the present. It's about what the best phone of the year was, across price brackets. It's about the best there is, how far ahead it is of the best there was, and whether it is the best there ever will be.
