Unwind

digit DIARY

It is said that the anniversary issues are the toughest. But the soothsayers at Digit have been wrong so often that Nos-tradamus would have been ashamed for. Poor little homesick Manish ended going back to Hyderabad again, this time for Christmas. With Jayesh out of the picture and Siddharth down with a myriad number of diseases, Mithun was at his wit's end having taken on the brunt of the work load.

Nikhil was away for most of the month, he decided to pool all his holidays and take most of the month off, and finally when he did decide to come in, he got run over by a car. Not the whole of him but just his foot. So he's practically been on leave the entire month. Abhijit had a pretty fun month getting to test plenty of computer mice. His testing methodology would often be a little irksome, especially when he'd jerk the mice across the table creating sounds that'd only be heard at a dhobi ghat.

Arnab's month was quite uneventful as most of them are except for when he went to the IIT Techfest. He took Young Yanger along with him and ended up getting Yanger more confused than he already had been. Arnab had his first viral video at the Techfest having garnered more views than anything else so far. Last we saw Arnab, he'd upped his hipster cred and only responds if called "The" Arnab.

We have a transfer from the Delhi office, his name is Karthik or was it Karthek? The guy is yet to come out of his shell and sits by his desk hunched over his laptop typing away mercilessly, ignoring all the fun and frolicking that happens a few feet away. It will take some time but he shall join the dark side as well. vader breathing effect

How we unwind

Rogue One

We were divided on this one, while most of the team are ardent fans of the Star Wars franchise, the mere fact that a good portion of the movie had been reshoot had naysayers spelling out the doom of the series. But we decided to give Rogue One the benefit of the doubt and boy, are we glad we did! The movie certainly lived up to the others in the franchise even though it's just a spin off. The space battles were magnificent and having experienced the movie in a Dolby Atmos theatre surely helped. It's a pity that half the team didn't watch it, as the ones who did can barely hold the spoilers.
