The bomb's ticking away, you have your cross-hair positioned at the entry point. You spot your enemy enter and pull an inhuman flick with your scoped weapon; eliminating them and winning the round for your team. Of course, you have exceptional reaction time and skills, but winning that round wouldn't have been possible if your gaming mouse fell short on accuracy. While buying a gaming mouse, it's always better to prioritise the sensor and shape rather than drooling over RGB lighting.

Hence, we procured several gaming mice and compared them to find out which one could strike a balance between accuracy, comfort and features.

We've gone through a number of variables and tests to determine the performance and other aspects. To learn how exactly these parameters were evaluated, we recommend that you jump to the 'How we tested' section to know more.

THE COMPETITION

Our search came down to 15 of the most popular gaming mice in the market across a wide price bracket. This comparison will act as a guide that you can return back to whenever you've made up your mind to buy your next gaming mouse. Apart from the specifications and scores, the pros and cons of each mice
