recommending the mouse for gaming, especially for FPS games. However, you'll only need to worry about accuracy if you're a low CPI player. If your FPS gaming doesn't involve much hand movement but mostly twists in your wrist, you could be happy with the Cerberus.

Editor's Pick Logitech Proteus Core G502

At the test labs, we were rooting for the G502 to win the comparison hands down. It still remains our favourite gaming mouse because of everything it delivers. Holding the mouse is a treat. The palm bump perfectly aligns with our hands every time, and each time it's hard to believe that this is a universal design. Having used only small and lightweight mice, the G502 does feel heavy, but some of us were able to adapt thanks to the adjustable weights.

We are all for ergonomic mice, so if it wasn't the G502, it would have either been the Zowie EC2-A or the Death Adder Elite. With so many mice lying around, we got the opportunity to experiment with different grips and discover how it affected the gamepla. After having tested so many mice at a stretch, we've been reassured that the shape, comfort and accuracy of a gaming mice will trump any of the RGB voodoo being advertised to sell these gaming mice. Don't be fooled. Until then, happy fragging. d
