

digit diary

If you are ever curious about what the digit gang is upto, this is the place to get all the inside info. From the latest game we're obsessing about to the newest intern we're driving up the wall – it's all here folks.

Welcome to a brand new Digit! As you can see, things look different. But don't worry, we're all still the same here at the Digit test labs. We've just gotten ourselves a facelift (sort of?).

Phew, what a month! We haven't had a moment's, it being the anniversary issue and all that. But we're veterans when it comes to pulling all-nighters, so no worries.

Souvik joined us in the labs this month, deciding that he'd had enough of Delhi and that Mumbai was more to his taste. Along with him came a few perks, one of which has Siddharth particularly happy. You see, our friend Souvik is the resident "car guy". Meaning he gets to test drive all them fancy cars. Siddharth likes driving fancy cars. You see where we're going with this right? This month Sid got to drive around the city in a Jaguar, a car he (or any of us for that matter) would normally never dream of getting into.

Yanger even wanted to take a selfie inside the car.

Speaking of Yanger, the young devout actually skipped church on a Sunday! -collective gasps in the test lab ensue-

Mithun likes to test things thoroughly, so he was a bit apprehensive about the haptic feedback soles we received in the labs. But Mithun being Mithun, thoroughly test it he did, by running 6 kms straight, followed by 18 hours of sleep.

Sometimes when we're in a pinch, we end up having to bend some rules to get things done. Like maybe tor-renting for instance. But we're all good at identifying the potentially harmful ones. Or that's what we thought. Abhijit managed to screw his own comp up after downloading an unverified torrent. Good going dude.

On the Delhi side of things, Prasad seems have gotten a ligament in his leg torn. Coincidentally, it appears to be the same ligament Ibrahimovic recently tore. Which seems to be enough of a reason for Prasad to draw comparisons.

We haven't played CS:GO in ages. Actually, most of us haven't, although we still see "staticsid is playing Counter Strike: Global Offensive" every now and then. He's the only one who still has a rank, the rest of us actually work around here!

Speaking of CS:GO, there's a new operation out, Hydra (hail hydra! sorry, habit). This announcement had the boys contemplating about buying the operation and if they could make their money back with drops or not.

Mithun and Abhijit are going to Taiwan for Computex. Initially Sid was supposed to join them but plans change. Now you can see Sid grumbling whenever they start discussing their travel plans and all the "fun" they will supposedly have.

Hmm what else? Oh yes! Arnab can't create bootable USBs. Seriously, we were surprised too. He's been trying for two days. You might be wondering, wouldn't someone else in the labs know how to make one. You'd be right but where's the fun in that? ;)

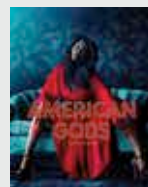

Quake Champions!

Almost everyone at Digit is a veteran Quake player so we were all understandably excited about the new Quake Champions open beta. Over the open beta week-end however, we learned that we actually suck at the game and only thought we were good at it. Nah that can't be right, matchmaking sucks, and uhh, Bethesda has crap servers! That's what the actual reason (probably) is.

Until season 7

All of us here at the labs have been watching American Gods of late; so, at least till the next season of Game of Thrones gets out, we're covered. Thing is, unlike GoT, everyone's been watching American Gods at their own pace. So no two people (Sid and Manish) can discuss the show without somebody (EVERYBODY) else in the office yelling "spoilers!". Sid wasn't too keen on the show initially, but it looks like he's getting more into it.