

Master & Dynamic MA770

Ever heard of a speaker made out of concrete? We haven't either. It's probably for good reason too. Concrete really isn't a material you'd want to make speakers out of. It's heavy and its sound properties are pretty bad. If you've ever been in an empty concrete room, then you know what we're talking about.

However, it doesn't look like that stopped Master & Dynamic from making a concrete speaker anyway. We see you asking "Whaaaaat? No way". Yes way. The folks at Master & Dynamic spent a good two years developing the speakers' design in such a way that the concrete would actually enhance the audio rather than hinder it. That is pretty darn impressive. And apparently, so is the audio this speaker produces. It also looks gorgeous btw, just in case you were worried.

The perks of having a heavy-duty concrete cabinet as compared to wood and plastic which is normally used is that the structure remains rigid. It isn't as susceptible to vibration, which can distort audio quality. This allowed M&D to use a softer material on the inside, that enhances audio quality.

How did they deal with the echoes you ask? Good question. They've apparently mixed the concrete with certain polymers (the recipe is super secret). The created material soaks up all them echoes with no problems at all. The MA770 is available for pre-order at $1,800 (₹1,20,000/- approx). In case you do order one, make sure you've arranged for proper transportation and help to move it into your home and set it up. This one's going to be more than a handful.

Life-sized Alien Queen

You never know what you might come across on eBay, so it's not uncommon for people to browse around for unique odds and ends.

Like this life-sized Alien Queen statue from the Alien movie franchise. The guys who made it (Distortions) back in the 90s, made only 5 of them, using molds used in the actual movie. The statue on sale has had a complete makeover. The head itself, which has been worked on to more accurately represent the movie, is a whopping 8 feet long! The asking price? $75,000 (₹49,00,000/- approx) only. Including free shipping of course.

The Smoking Dragon

What's a Smoking Dragon pipe doing here you ask? C'mon it's a dragon pipe! And it's a really cool fidget spinner too (err, basically it can spin on its base). Then it's got secret buttons on it to open its mouth and wings. And lastly, it's got a hidden camera in it! It's priced at $85,000 (₹55,00,000/- approx)! That's because the Smoking Dragon pipe weighs 300g – of which 275g is silver, 22g is gold and the remaining 3g is just diamonds, rubies, sapphires, garnets, tourmaline, nephrite and blue coral. whistles Unfortunately, it doesn't breathe fire.
