

Hacker trolls Mark Zuckerberg

Hacker broke into Harvard University's student paper and mocked Mark with fake news and edited photos. <http://digit.in/zoinkernburg>

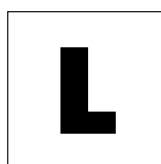

Instagram supports weblinks

Instagram's Direct messages finally supports external web links and photo orientations. <http://digit.in/InstaLink1>

The world needs more cyber security professionals right now, and you could be the one that saves the day!

Arnab Mukherjee | arnab@digit.in ast month, we told you all about why cybersecurity should be your problem too.

Little did we know that within a few days that point would be made clearer than ever following a global event. The WannaCry ransomware attack has done more for cybersecurity awareness than years of efforts from cybersecurity companies. Right now, everybody and their grandparents want to know about cybersecurity and how they can secure their digital selves – as they say, “once bitten, twice shy”. And in such an environment, it is needless to say that cybersecurity is a lucrative career almost everywhere in the world – including India.

THE REQUIREMENTS

India was one of the worst hit countries in the WannaCry outbreak – more than 40,000 systems were affected. And that’s just the disclosed number. According to another research from an independent security firm Quick Heal Technologies, about 48,000 computers in India were attacked by WannaCry, with most