

easy to use, guaranteed proxy service, then this site might be just the one. The listed sites on ProxyPortal are limited and their contents, in turn, are user curated. So you might find pirated content but that's not why we've included the site in this list. No sir, it's all about circumventing censorship. Honest!

9 EXPERIMENTS WITH GOOGLE

And now, for the 9th Whoa moment of the day. If you thought that HTML, CSS and the other web languages were all about making pretty websites and hosting cat videos, then you've been blind. Google hosts a bunch of pages where it's collected all of them experiments they've been running with web-based technologies. And sometimes, even more than that. Head over to (<https://aiexperiments.withgoogle.com/>) to play around with some simple yet interesting interactive AI experiments. Remember that Google game where you'd draw and Google would guess? It came from here. Then there's (<https://www.chromeexperiments.com/webgl>) which is sure to have you mesmerised with the creative possibilities of using WebGL to make websites.

Let Google take a guess.

You can simulate a pool complete with liquid physics or you can simply have a 3D visualisation that dances around in tune with music. Go explore, we're certain you'll be engrossed for a few days.

10 KNOW WHAT'S NEW IN THE LINUX WORLD

Choosing a particular distro and flavor of Linux is hard in and of itself so ubergeeks just compromise and get different ones for different devices. Keeping track of all the latest releases in that case becomes a royal pain in the neck though. But DistroWatch aims to solve just that. It's a massive collaborative effort with many many volunteers which collects all the details of new releases from most Linux and BSD flavors and presents it in one place. And oh, if you need suggestions, they also do a weekly newsletter with reviews on new distributions which is sure to make it easier for you to choose one. Or harder :/

11 MYSTERIES OF MUSIC GENRES

Did you know that Dancehall evolved from Reggae? Or that Grindcore and Metalcore evolved from Thrash Metal?

We've already listed a music discovery site that'll give you recommendations simply by picking a few of your favourite tracks. Now here's an interactive site that goes into each and every genre and charts out the path of its evolution. What's even better is that it also has curated lists of YouTube videos to help you understand exactly which all songs fall under that genre. Music genres are up to interpretation as well, to a certain extent. So don't write in to us complaining that the site got it wrong and you have it right. Please, leave us in peace to enjoy some Norwegian Death Metal. Arch Enemy FTW!

Link: <http://www.musicmap.info/>

12 TECHNOLOGY PARTY TRICK!

Have you ever seen those people who can "read your mind" and *cough*cough* guess the person you're thinking about? Well, now you can do that too! Silently fire up <http://en.akinator.com/personnages/> and answer the questions. It's usually eerily accurate and the few times it fumbles, it usually guesses right on the next pass. Akinator is far from perfect though, it has a tendency to repeat questions and it isn't well formatted or optimised but it does make for a fun little icebreaker at social gatherings and did we mention there are mobile apps as well?

13 TEST YOUR GOOGLE KNOWLEDGE

How well versed are you in what the world wants to know? Here's a chance to test it out: www.higherlowergame.com This admittedly very simple game has you guess which has more monthly searches between two queries. You get consecutive points for each right guess and it ends if you get one wrong. It has nice transitions, it's addictive and you learn something cool like Gonorrhea is more searched than Acne. Who would've ever think it, huh?

14 SMBC

With no single underlying theme, Saturday Morning Breakfast Cereal is a webcomic for those who like to have a few grey cells light up while reading