because we only have current DNA evidence to go by, and not skeletal DNA, for example, which would be more accurate. Because we don't know, we are providing all the different theories. That's the only way to be honest intellectually.

4. Here we disagree because there are countless independent studies that find that the Toba eruption did occur 74/75k years ago. However, I am open minded and would love to go through any sources you want to share.
5. We are not basing any of this on historians, British or otherwise, but on genetic data (mtDNA), based on a recently published peer-reviewed study.

Also, you should know that our team is made up of Indians from all over the country (including the south), and we don't think of ourselves as anything but geeks. Although they have all read this story, we don't think speaking to any of them would reveal any truths. We are not interested in opinions, merely facts. Our DNA carries the truths of our origins, and of course interpretations of the results vary, but certain things are currently accepted as fact in science. For example, that humans originated from Africa is widely accepted, and the data matches that theory. Until a better theory comes along, if asked, we will 100% of the time say humans came from Africa. If that theory is proved wrong, we will immediately stop saying that, because our only interest is finding the truth, and not to feed our own biases.

I apologise if the article hurt your sentiments, but please believe me, we had no intention of doing that. We might do a more indepth article on the topic later, so please share whatever sources you base your understanding on, and if we haven't already read them, we will happily do so, because we only seek the truth.

I only have this to say for this month's design experimentation: this was the only thing left to happen to Digit. Another thing is a matter of respect to you people, the price asked for the mag. Still the same after all these years of journey (towards success and growing...). While reading through the titles, I am always clueless how exactly the quality is maintained and preserved in spite of such a quantity. This month's issue was whopping 49 pages bigger! Unbelievable! Finally got two things to ask. How does making DVD contents available online, sound? Second – this one's a wish – to get a combined reply from my favourite digit duo SP and RSS.

We will be providing you links to download the DVD content soon. Also: Your wish is...

Letter of the Month

Greetings to the one and only Team Digit. I am 15 years old, and am from Nagpur. I have been a loyal reader of the Digit Magazine for about 2 years now and all I will say is – you guys have played a huge role in making me who I am today. In my friends and family, I have come to be known as the Tech Guru – up to date with all the latest news about tech, specializing in smartphones, and that is all because of this magazine, well almost. I was always interested in tech but this magazine provided me a lot of exposure that no one ever did, so thanks a lot for that. I have been a loyal member of the PC Master Race because console controllers don't work for me.

Now coming to the June issue, it was amazing! The new look and layout somehow makes the magazine feel more techy. Though it arrived really late, it was worth the wait. Really loved the cover page and the cover story was incredible. The geeky alternatives also rocked. This month's skoar! was also amazing. The Reeves are so detailed, that is one of the reasons why I love Digit. The Nintendo Switch teardown was also awesome. You should do this more often. All things considered, according to me, your 16th anniversary issue lived up to its expectations. Some suggestions: why don't you do giveaways? Also, how about an Assassin's Creed poster?

Now coming to the subject. I need some help: my potato PC can't handle AAA titles. Forget that even NFS Most Wanted (2005) lags badly at max settings. I believe that should be enough (though I have more). I have tried every software tweak to boost my PC but it just doesn't work. What should I do?

–Harshit Tank

Thanks for your awesome loooong letter Harshit. Sorry we had to edit it to fit. After going through your PC specs, we think even a 1050 will be a massive boost for you. That'll be about ₹9000. If not that, then a GT 1030 for ₹5760 is good enough. But seriously time for an upgrade. Convince your overlords.
