

digit diary

If you are ever curious about what the digit gang is upto, this is the place to get all the inside info. From the latest game we're obsessing about to the newest intern we're driving up the wall – it's all here folks.

What a month! We really weren't expecting to go through the grinder right after the anniversary issue but boy oh boy were we in for a surprise. This could possibly be the latest we've ever closed the magazine.

We had an offsite this month so everybody up and left for Chandigarh. While in Chandigarh, we indulged in some team-building activities like Table Tennis and Foosball. Who are we kidding, it was an all out Delhi vs Mumbai showdown! Mumbai won. Mostly. We're kidding, but it was good fun. Post all the "competitive sports" we enjoyed a boys' night out. Don't read too much into that. This is literally the second time ever Arnab has come out with us. The first time of course, was the previous offsite.

He always seems to be able to find an excuse not to come. This time however, he had no choice. We soon discovered a new side to Arnab and Yanger in this night of inebriation.

While Arnab becomes a philosophical life advisor, the otherwise quiet and shy Yanger unleashes his inner beast mode.

We had four new interns this month, Prithvi, Haran, Pradhyumna, and Aman. Four! You'd think we'd close sooner with all these extra hands. We thought so too, we were naive. The innocent young padawans had no idea what they were in for. We're sure they will be changed men once they leave the Digit test labs. If you thought working at Digit was a dream job, you might want to consider asking these guys their opinion first.

One of the pros of having so many interns is that the test labs were loud and eventful. We spent many an evening having discussions and debates making resourceful use of our time (and not closing the magazine). The labs are going to feel quite barren once they leave. Insert forced sniff here

Another perk of having such a crowded test lab = LAN parties!

We booted up some good old Warcraft 3 for some 6-man RTS action. Now, we can understand the interns not being good at the game, but we totally forgot how bad Abhijit was at the game and ended up making unfair teams. It was a pubstomp. But once we were done with Warcraft, we moved on to Quake. Haran and Pradhyu both tried their hand at besting Siddharth in 1v1s. Both got humiliated, in the literal sense and in-game, several times over. But hey, at least they tried, and went down fighting.

Anyway, back to justifying why we couldn't close on time to appease our overlords. Tis' around this time (June end ish) that the monsoons are in full flair around here. The monsoons also bring with it a whole host of obstacles (read: sicknesses, viruses, etc). Four of us fell victim to either some kind of food poisoning or viral fever. At the same time too. Totally not convenient at all.

QUOTE OF THE MONTH

"What is life"
- HardOn (Haran)

Steam Sales, Ho!

The Steam Sales started towards the end of the month. Yet another distraction to add to the ever growing list of things distracting us from actually closing the magazine. We were all basically glued to our screens at 10:30 pm sharp looking out for juicy deals and collecting all them Steam Summer Sale sticker packs and trading cards.

PLAYERUNKNOWN'S BATTLEGROUNDS

Don't ask why it's in all caps, that's just how the game dev writes it. We're all planning to grab ourselves a copy and start playing PUBG. So we'll probably stream it too. Got a copy of the game? Hit us up!
